THE CONSOLIDATED ROAD
WHAT AN OLD AND EXPERIENCED RAILROAD MAN SAYS.

Predicts a Big Future Increase of Earnings for the Road—His Reasons Therefor—The Company Elects Another Highly Esteemed New Haven Man on the Board of Directors.

The directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad met at the Grand Central depot in New York Saturday, it having been the first meeting since last June. All of the members were present except Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. Charles P. Clark of this city, the president of the company, presided.

A memorial tribute to the late ex-Governor Morris was voted after suitable remarks of sorrow regarding the death of Mr. Morris had been made. To fill the vacancy on the board Arthur D. Osborne, president of the Second National bank, this city, was elected. Mr. Osborne is known to all the business community of this city as a man of high character and sterling integrity. Mr. Osborne is a native of Fairfield county. For several years he was assistant clerk of the superior court, the late General Alfred H. Terry being clerk, and when Colonel Terry enlisted in the War of the Rebellion, Mr. Osborne succeeded him as clerk, retaining the position many years and winning approval for the admirable manner in which he discharged the duties. Upon the death of his father, Mr. Osborne inherited most of his goodly fortune. Later he became owner of considerable stock in the Second National bank, and was soon afterward elected a director. Upon the death of Samuel Hemingway of Fair Haven, about fifteen years ago, Mr. Osborne was elected president of the bank, and has held that office ever since. He owns considerable stock in the Consolidated road. He has never taken any great interest in railroad affairs, but his excellent knowledge of finance and his keen business insight, will make him a valuable member of the New Haven road directors.

Director Osborne's father was the late Judge Thomas B. Osborne, who graduated at Yale in 1814, was admitted to the New Haven bar three years later, and until 1854 practiced law in Fairfield county. In 1854 he returned to New Haven and for several years was professor of law in Yale law school. He was a Whig and from 1839 to 1843 represented Fairfield county in the national house of representatives. For many years he resided on Crown street, where the son now resides.

The board voted the usual quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., no doubt dividends per annum will be maintained and without difficulty. The last quarter was one of the most prosperous in the history of the road. A prominent railroad man said yesterday regarding the Consolidated: "Look at the vast difference between the financial running of the Consolidated road and that which has characterized many other roads that might be named in this country which have either toppled over into bankruptcy or had a tight squeeze in escaping it. Look at the gigantic stock watering of big railroads that has been done in this country. Look at the vast extensions which have been made by big roads into wild and sparsely settled states, which extensions became a burden on those roads and the result of which has been a reduction of dividends from 8 to 2 per cent. in some cases, or worse than that at times. Some of these extensions they were almost forced to make in a wild spirit of competition that prevailed."

"The Consolidated road, on the other hand, has been conducted honestly and with regard to the rights and interests of stockholders. For the big increase of stock held by the Consolidated road there is plenty to show. The dollars spent have been spent in improvements, in making the road second to none in the country. Vast sums have been spent, but spent in making the road first class in every respect. Lots of dangerous grade crossings have been eliminated. This expedites the business and saves also a heavy yearly bill for damages, to say nothing of the great lessening of the loss of valuable human lives. These improvements enable the road to make fast time and to handle great quantities of freight, which they were unable to handle before. Highly valuable rights of way have been secured and highly valuable property in the line of freight yards and terminals and dock facilities have been acquired. Look at the immense lot of valuable land the road has acquired in New Haven alone in the last few years. Look at the immense value in wharf property in New Haven alone. All these improvements speak for themselves. They are not watered stock. There is a dollar for every dollar expended. All these improvements are made are permanent. By and by the improvement will be substantially completed and but little money will then have to be expended. The earning power of the road has been in the meantime immensely increased. No! I am not a caviller nor a doubter as to the future of the road. I see that with only an ordinary increase of manufacturing business and population in New England a splendid future and much bigger earnings for the Consolidated." This opinion here told is that of a man who has had a long experience in railroading.

Labor Commissioner Samuel B. Horne and Chief Clerk William W. Ives of Norwich left Saturday for Minneapolis to attend the national convention of labor commissioners.

DEAR SIRS:
Owing to the recent strike ordered by the Upholsterers' Union of this city (and of which you doubtless have information through the newspapers), by which an advance of twenty-five per cent. in wages was demanded by our workmen, and which demand we were compelled to comply with or temporarily suspend operations, together with the recent advance in silk plushes and upholstery goods, and in fact almost all material entering into the composition of our goods, it will be necessary for us to advance the price of our parlor suits and couches on all orders received by us subsequent to this date.

This advance, however, will be as moderate as possible, and as limited as the circumstances will permit.

Yours truly,
P. NATHAN & CO.

The foregoing is only one of many similar letters. The cream of it is this. We bought so extensively before the strikes, and upward strides of labor and material that these things don't bother us. Don't make the expensive error of buying furniture before you see ours. Carpets either. Upholstery either.
